

Having a loved one leave his or her relationship with God is one of the most emotionally painful circumstances of life because of present and eternal consequences. If you love and pray for a prodigal, you know the heartache first-hand. Sometimes knowing how to pray is overwhelming, and sometimes the journey is lonely as we prayerfully wait for them to surrender to our amazing God.

I would love to come alongside you and offer prayer support and encouragement. My Prayer for Prodigals reaches to those painful places and brings comfort and hope, is a source of faith-building encouragement, and offers help either in praying in agreement with you or in suggesting Scriptural prayers that are absolutely praying in God's perfect will.

There are several simple ways to connect to and benefit from the ministry:

- The Prayer for Prodigals website (<https://prayer-for-prodigals.com/>) contains an encouraging blog, prayers, and information for other resources.
- The Facebook page (<https://www.facebook.com/prayerforprodigals7/>) where I post weekly prayer starters, encouraging Scriptural promises and thoughts, and other links and information. I also pray for prodigals weekly via Facebook Live on Tuesdays at 6:55 p.m. Central Time on this page.
- Instagram (<https://www.instagram.com/prayerforprodigals7/>) for short encouraging statements of faith.
- Prayer starters, which include a promise to build faith and a praise for a name or attribute of God that reveals His propensity to answer the week's Scriptural prayer. Anyone can sign up by writing me at prayerforprodigals7@gmail.com.

All of these links can be found on the website "About" page of the website.

You do not have to walk this road alone! If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to ask.

Believing for them all,

Tami H. Winkelman